Description

write the announcement...

See for example:

Requirements:

* An overview of what's new and anything else coolo will share. Try to write something about the coolest of the packages he said are updated... Often, picking what YOU find interesting is just fine.
* A section on reporting bugs. Link to the most annoying bugs (see #395) and bugzilla. some testing-and-contributing text in this article https://news.opensuse.org/2013/01/17/the-opensuse-12-3-beta-is-out-time-for-pizza/
* A section on how to get involved - see "this page on getting packages in 12.1": https://news.opensuse.org/2011/09/27/get-your-package-in-factory-for-12-1/

Hint: when logged in on news.o.o you can simply edit one of the earlier announcements & copy-paste the html code over ;-)

- Description updated
- % Done changed from 0 to 10
- Status changed from New to In Progress

Anditosan has promised to check if he can write something. I'll review!

Would it make sense to also include information about the Roadmap? IMO it's very important to announce that very prominently, not just hidden in a mail to Factory.
I've put the dates here: https://en.opensuse.org/openSUSE-Roadmap let's add the roadmap info. Coolo even announced it on Factory:

(very coolo-style, indeed)

- % Done changed from 10 to 100
- Status changed from In Progress to Resolved

This was of course finished and published. Awesome work by Andi!
