Restrict workers to have full API access by random, individual tokens (was: change worker authentication)

Difficulty:
Description
workers currently use user tokens and therefore have access to the full API. Workers should have different privileges that only allows them to grab jobs, set jobs to finish etc. That makes sure test code run by a worker cannot accidentally nor intentionally mess with the API.

And as discussed in the hall earlier: every worker should have its own random token - and we should IMO offer an option to allow every worker to generate that token himself, i.e. plug&play.

Yes. As long as we rely on nfs anyways I think the idea with dropping a token to the shared space would be ok for now too.

I think by now the design has changed enough to make this whole thing obsolete, e.g. we do not rely on NFS anymore.

this has nothing to do with nfs
