Description
Can we make weekly OpenQA meetings available to members of our community?
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• All topics covered are reflected in tickets or GitHub branches, which are already public• Jitsi works without access to internal resources• Currently meetings take place every Tuesday at 11:00 CET 1015 CET/CEST - the timezone might be a concern for interested parties• The meeting schedule is not documented in Redmine at the moment

While I like to be as open as possible where it makes sense I consider the weekly meetings to be focussed on the "core team" within SUSE. We have contributors from outside SUSE as well as inside. We could have a bit more casual call where we can also provide support to others. IMHO the weekly meetings in the current form should really be by the team and for the team along with the requirements we can have on SUSE employees, i.e. we can ask team members to provide their almost full resources to the work that the team takes responsibility for which is nothing we can demand from any other contributor. So in short: -1, better have a different community-specific meeting on top.

But if you think it starts at 11:00, that explains why you're late so often :)

Having <https://meet.opensuse.org/> provides tooling for handling such meetings. Requires openID account, same as for redmine.

- Description updated

Yes, good to have <https://meet.opensuse.org> . So far we use <https://meet.jit.si/> though as it seems to provide servers in more regions on the globe so that the experience is better for anyone not in Europe.

Fixed the time in the description.

I asked the internal team in <https://chat.suse.de/group/openqa-dev?msg=e9J6pordJXzgytA2j> if anyone minds, otherwise I would go ahead.

- Status changed from Feedback to Resolved

Moved to <https://progress.opensuse.org/projects/qa/wiki/Wiki#Team-meetings> as decided. We can now wait for guests to arrive or invite on special occasions
